

TRY ONE OF THESE FREE ANTI-VIRUS PROGRAMS

If your anti-virus program for which you pay an annual fee is about to expire, consider one of these FREE products. You won't be disappointed and you will save some money at the same time.

Experts agree that you should never have more than one antivirus program running on your computer. Install only one of these. Any of the 3-A's are considered to be the best free products in the industry.

Microsoft's Windows Defender is popular because it is built-into the Windows 10 operating system and starts working the moment you start your computer. Other programs take several seconds to start doing their work. Earlier, Defender was used by the researchers as the baseline for evaluating other anti-virus applications and these three programs were rated much higher. However, many gurus are now viewing the Microsoft product in a new and very positive light.

AVIRA FREE ANTI-VIRUS continues to grow in popularity, and the latest major release shows why this free security program is at the top of the charts. A brilliantly customizable one-click threat killer, baked-in anti-spyware and anti-adware to compliment the antivirus engine, the ability to scan "locked" files, a rebuilt heuristics engine, and infection protections for its own source files are what's new and notable in AntiVir. You can run a scan at night and not worry about the scan pausing and waiting for user input before it continues. Despite the nag window that pops up following the frequent threat definition file updates, the program is well worth trying to see how far free security has come.
