

WIDGETS IN WINDOWS 11

Windows 11 includes a new web-based interface called Widgets that is accessible via a new icon that sits at the left end of the Taskbar. (This icon can be turned off.)

Widgets displays a customizable board (Microsoft's term for widgets), which are small cards that display dynamic data from apps and online services. It is pre-configured to display personal information like weather, photos, local news and sports, traffic, and the like at the top and then a scrolling list of news and other web-based articles that may be of interest. Widgets replaces a Windows 10 feature called News and interests, and it looks and works similarly.

To toggle Widgets with the keyboard, press WINKEY + W.
